

Archidiaconal Wills (or, Archdeacon Wills) presided over by the Archdeacons 1665 to 1669

The following is the wills, presentments, etc. for 1665 to 1669, per the LDS microfilm #0106201

To the best of my ability, the enclosed Wills are a 'transcription', rather than a 'translation'. That is, I have tried to record the exact spellings, and have for the most part, started and ended lines as these are written in the original text (except in the 1637-1644 ArWills, when I was still feeling my way). Hopefully, my work will be useful for the next person who comes along and does a modern 'translation', which would make the wills easier to both read and search. There has been a glitch in my transcription, however: my computer spellcheck corrects what it perceives as 'misspelled' words. I may not have caught all its efforts to modernize the spellings. Also, though I re-read each will or presentment after typing it, I am sure I have missed 'typos'; I regret this. If you find them during your studies, please feel free to correct them.

Where I cannot make out a word, or letters in a word, or where part of the word is hidden or torn off, I have indicated the same by using a dashed line, e.g., '-----'. I have also frequently indicated why there is a dashed line (e.g., '[fold]----lie' means that the right side of the line / word is hidden in a fold, generally caused by the binding of the page into a book). Once in a while, when a line has been crossed out so that the '-----' would not be apparent, I have used 'xxxx', that is: 'xxxxx'.

I have used a line across the page to indicate a new page in the original, rather than trying to paginate as the wills and presentments were done. However, when a will crossed several pages, I did not put a line across the page to delineate this, but rather included all the will between the dividing lines as if it were recorded on one page. I did this for easier review of a will.

You will notice that some wills contain notes referring to other wills of a spouse or parent or child. Sometimes, when reviewing the Index, I could see a connection between wills. Sometimes, it was glaringly simple to make. Other times, it took hours of study to 'prove' a suspected connection. But there are many other connections to be made. That is why I have created a 'Master Index', that is, an Index that combines the indices of all the Archdeacon Wills from the 1600s that I have transcribed. I hope it is as useful to you as I envision it to be.

Decades ago, the Wills were microfilmed and then put onto a film that could be rented from the microfilmer for review. This separated the wills into groups of, usually, 5 years per film. Each book of wills that I have created includes the wills of one film. For each book, I created an Index. The Index at the end of a given book is a partial index, of children, siblings, and some who received legacies (even though relationship was not recorded), and some others who were mentioned in wills. Supervisors of underage children were usually aunts and uncles of the children, but not always; generally I included them in the Index. But not everyone is listed in the index, so if you are seeking a particular person, scanning the full will might reveal him or her.

I have indexed the presentments for fornication and adultery, not because of any purulent interest, but because they sometimes lead to a child (maybe an ancestor?) or to a marriage. Other presentments that indicate relationships, or that show an interesting bit of culture, are also listed, but many are not. A frequent punishment for those presented at Church Court is "3 dies eccla", that is, doing penance by confessing his or her sin and asking forgiveness in front of the appropriate parish church congregation on 3 different Sundays. Often, a 'penitential habit', that is, special clothing, was worn during the confession, or a bridle, indicating the need for the person to 'bridle' their lying tongue.

You will notice a line under occasional letters, e.g., pcell ('parcel'). 'p' indicates par, pre, por, etc. Sometimes the underlining indicates that those letters were written as superscripts in the original, which was often a way of indicating an abbreviation of the word, e.g., execr is short for 'executor'. Another abbreviation for: 'y' = 'th', so 'yt' = that, 'yr' = their, 'ye' = the, etc. Other frequent abbreviations: or = our, wt = what, wch = which, wth = with, sd = said. 'dj' and 'dim' are abbreviations for the Latin word for 'half'. 'I' was often used in place of 'j', especially in the first half of the 1600s and before. So 'enioy' = enjoy, 'ioynt' = joint, 'iurati' = jurati, etc. An 'm' with a bar across the top is an abbreviation for a double 'mm'; sometimes a word with a single 'm', such as William, is written without the 'm', but with a bar across the word indicating the 'm', so that, for example, 'Will' with the tail of the last 'l' being brought up to make a bar through the word is transcribed as 'Willm'. The same is true of 'n'.

Dollin and Donnell (in Manx, the 'n' and 'l' were interchangeable sometimes) morphed into Donold, and then into Daniel. Ginnet/Johnette from the 1500s and early 1600s became Joney, which became Judith in the mid to late 1700s. Ewan/Euan is sometimes used for Hugh, and sometimes for John, and sometimes it is its own name. Bahie is a nickname for Bridget, though by the 1600s, it is given as a name in its own right. Mally is a nickname for Mary, and was sometimes be used that way in the 1600s, rather than a name in its own right. Bessie, of course, is Elizabeth, and Nelly is Ellin, which became Ellinor in the late 1600s. Questions: Are Colquit and Calcott the same name (if so, the change seems to have occurred in the 1500s), and are Cottiam and Cottingham also the same family? The last name Juke (often spelled 'Juch' in the 1600s) became Duke in the late 1600s / early 1700s.

An aside: sometimes 'Juch' looks like 'Inch', a translation I have seen given to Juch. However, in 1660s, a Henry Juke was present a lot in the Will Court. There are times when his surname looks like 'Inch', but most of the time, his surname clearly is written as 'Juch'. Since I have subscribed to the 'Inch' surname in the past, it was interesting to see this, which proved to me than 'Inch' is actually 'Juch', or, later, 'Juke', and still later, the Anglicized 'Duke'.

There are Latin words I have stumbled over, especially when the penmanship was poor; someone who knows Latin needs to correct my erroneous guesses.

Sometimes, 'T' looks like our 'F'; this can be confusing such as with the surname 'Teare', often written 'Teere', especially since there is also a family 'Feere'. However, through most of the late 1600s, the first 'F' of a name was written as a double 'ff'. So Feere would be written ffeere, not Feere during these years. Sometimes, 's' and 'f' are difficult to differentiate, and I am sure I have transcribed them incorrectly sometimes, substituting 'f' when it should have been 's', and vice versa. Some clerks make 't' and 'b' difficult to decide between. Transition from old style writing to new is often mixed in a single document in the last half of the 1600s, so that, for example, an old-style 'r' can be confusing and look like a different letter (or couple of letters) when a new-style 'r' is also being used in the will. As mentioned before, please feel free to make corrections.

Place names and their spellings might be obvious to a Manxman, but not to me when the penmanship is poor or odd; I have spent tens of minutes comparing the presumed spellings of places with AW Moore's and George Broderick's books of place names; sometimes these were helpful, sometimes not.

I have used modern spellings for the parishes (Andrews/Andrewes = Andreas, Malue = Malew, Mahold / Machold = Maughold, etc.), except for Lezayre Parish. Through most of the 1600s, Lezayre was written as 'Leyayre', or 'Ley Ayre' or even as 'the Ayre' (see ArW 1667 #12). The 'z' was probably an accidental switch of the first 'y' by a parish clerk (in the old written text, a sloppy old 'y' can look similar to a modern 'z'), but why it continued and became wide spread is a mystery.

In the 1600s (and until 1752 in England / Isle of Man), the new year started on March 25th. So January 1667 before the change of the new year, is actually January 1668 in our reckoning. The standard indication for this is: January 1667/68, which form I have used. The starting of the New Year in March leads to a problem for us: November for us is the 11th month on the calendar, but actually obtained its name as the 9th month of the year. The same is true of September (the 7th month before 1752, as its name implies), October (the 8th month), and December (the 10th month). So if, before 1752, you see the month written 8ber or 8th menses, the scribe was referring to October, not to August (which is the 8th month on our calendar).

In the 1600s and before, a woman on the Isle of Man was legally listed under her maiden name even after marriage.

By the 1660s, especially in those parishes (e.g., Malew, Braddan) experiencing more English influence, this began to change. However, even in the early 1600s, wives from England, or who had English husbands, typically followed the English custom of exchanging their maiden surname for their husband's. Then there are instances where the wife's family was more important than the husband's, so she continued to be listed first under her maiden surname even when the parish had mostly adopted the 'new' English custom. This can be confusing. When it was not clear which name was a woman's maiden surname and which her husband's surname, I indicated the same by writing 'or vice versa' next to it, or by indicating it in some other manner. When I titled each will, I did so using the modern custom of putting the woman's husband's surname first. If she married several times, then the first listed name is the current husband, the next surname was the previous husband, the next surname would be an even earlier husband, etc (I do not think I have seen more than 3 husbands), until the last surname is her maiden surname.

You will notice in the wills that people would be bequeathed 'half a blanket', or 'a blanket betwixt them', or 'a third of a sheep', etc. On the north of the Island, a woman or a man each owned half of their goods and land; on the south side, a woman owned a third, and the man owned two thirds. Since they could bequeath only what they owned, then they could leave only 'half' to the inheritor. Other times, it is clear that poverty made the ownership of a cow, for example, too expensive, so that 3 or 4 or more people might own it. How this worked out in practical living boggles my mind. How do you and your married sibling decide on who gets the blanket?; does one have it one week, and the other uses it the next?

For those like me who do not know what a firlet, barrell, bowle, or pottle is:
Per ArW 1658 #70: There are 10 pottles to a barrell

Comment about the costs of 'corn': By the late 1660s, barley was priced at 5s per bowle, oats at 2s per bowl, rye at 4s per bowl, and peas at 4d per pottle.

Regarding money: 14 Manx pence = 1 Manx shilling = 1 English shilling = 12 English pence; and 20 shillings (both Manx and English) = 1 pound.

A heckle, not infrequently listed in an inventory, is a wicked looking instrument, with many nails driven in rows through a board, used to comb flax, to both removed the retted woody part and to straighten flax fibers prior to spinning it into a thread. The board dimensions might be 6" x 8" or larger, and ¾" thick, with a handle extension.

Growing flax for linen was common on the Isle of Man (a two year process: first, you have to grow the flax, then 'retting' it for weeks to months by leaving it water to rott off the woody part, which leave behind the filamentous 'thread' that is gathered and combed, spun, and finally woven into cloth). A very fancy heckle from the 1840s that I own has 3 rows (often there are more) of 4" hand forged nails driven through the wood and a metal plate (usually there is no metal plate), with 22 nails in each outside row and 9 in the inside row, in a space of 1" x 4 3/4". 'Wheels' in a will refers to spinning wheels: a large wheel was typically used to spin wool, and a small wheel for spinning flax. Some may have been too poor to own a wheel, and instead have used a 'drop spindle' though I have never seen one mentioned; perhaps they were too crude and easily made / broken so that they were not thought worthy of passing on to another.

Per Archdeacon Will 1660 #37 Bride, of Elizabeth Moore alias Thompson, died before 11 February 1659/60: grandson Charles Moore was first listed as a 'nephew', but then 'nephew' was scratched out and 'grandchild' written above it. This is an example of grandchildren being called 'nephew' in the 1600s and before. Those we now call 'nephew' were designated 'sister's son', etc. However, sometimes, especially as the 1600s progressed, nephew came to take on our meaning.

In the early and mid 1600s, when the name 'Christian' was abbreviated, the abbreviation looked like 'Xpin' or 'Xpian'. However, as the years go by, by the mid to late 1600s, the 'p' looks more and more like an 's'. Based on this, I believe that the 'p' is a sloppy 's', and that 'Xpin' and 'Xpian' should actually be transcribed as 'Xsin' and 'Xsian', respectively.

On the Isle of Man in the 1600s and before, it was not uncommon to find two children with the same given name alive at the same time. One would be called 'the elder' or 'senior', and the second was called 'the younger' or 'junior'. However, there was at least one family in the mid 1600s with three Johns alive at the same time, differentiated as John senior, John junior, and John the youngest: see ArW 1663 #92 Braddan, of William Creer.

I made an empirical decision to list surnames under one (generally the modern) spelling, so that families could be studied more easily, with names easier to find and compare. Thus, Quole/Quooile is listed under Coole, as is Cooil (which is a 2nd modern spelling). The Cordeige / Corraige / Corjeag family is listed under all three surnames; sorry about that, but I couldn't decide which to use. Tunman is under Taubman. Kerroush / Kerrush / etc, are under Kerruish. Cloage is under Clague. Corrin / Carran / Karran / Carown, etc., which may all be the same family, just different clerk spellings, are listed separately because I wasn't sure whether or not they were all the same family. While Caralaugh became Careful in the 1800s, it is listed under the old spelling. Moughton / Mughton / Moghton are under Moughton. Dougherdy is under Daugherty. Caiskill which became Castle is under Caistill. Camaish and Comish are separate. Colleish / Collish etc., is under Colleash. The propensity for the Manx in earlier years to speak an 'l' for an 'n', and vice versa, may make Crellin and Crennel the same family, but they seem to have separated rather early and so are listed separately. The modern spelling of Crinnell is Crenilt, which Crinnell is listed under. Conley is under Connelly. Colquit and Calcot seem to have separated before and around the 1600s, and though they may still be the same people in the 1600s, I have listed them separately. Cowper and Cooper are the same name, and under Cooper. Cooye, which I have assumed is 'Cooil', is under Coole. Curleod is under Corlett. Booye / Boye / Boddaugh are listed under Boyde, as well as under Booye and Boddaugh. The letters 's' and 'r' had the same problem as 'l' and 'n' in early Manx, so Costeen became Corteen (that is how the Costeens are listed in the typed Index created in the late 1800s / early 1900s) but I have listed the two families separately. Cotteen is probably Corteen / Costeen, but I have listed it separately. Cotter is under Cottier. Cowne / Cowen / etc, are listed under Cowin. Cowell is under Cowle. Crobbin is under Crebbin. Credeen and Credjeen are under Cregeen. Though I have tried to be consistent, there are times when I am not, so if you do not find a name under one spelling, look for other similar spellings, or for old spellings.

Some surnames have two listings: the old name (Knackle, Booye, Boddaugh, Kinry [McHenry], etc), and the Anglicized name (Knickle, Boyd, Harrison [Harry's son], etc). But I have not done this with all surnames. Look under different spellings if you do not find the surname under the expected spelling. Other Manx oddities: Juke/Juch and Duke are the same surname. I have combined the surnames Gell, Gill, and Gale, all under Gell, since in various decades, a given family might use any one of the three names. The surname Garrett was 'Carrett' in the 1600s and before. The surname Faragher is recorded under 'Fargher', since at least sometimes, these surnames were used interchangeably. I have chosen to use Cowin for the surnames Cown / Cowin, and Lewin for Lewn / Lewin, etc. Cottiam and Cottingham are probably the same family. I have read that Colquit and Calcot are also the same family, which seems likely to me, though they seem to have separated by the 1600s. Costeen / Costean and Corteen are the same family; Cotteen may also belong to this family. Cormode and Kermode are the same family, the spelling changing depending on the parish and who recorded the name. Corjeage and Cordeige and Coraige / Corraige seem to be the same family. Coole is also spelled Cooil and Cooye. Coark and Quark are the same, and became Quirk. Cloage became Clague. Around the 1660s, Steane became Stewan which became Stephen and Steven. As you can see, surnames, as well as given names, were fluid before the 1700s, and even into the 1700s, with spellings changed based on changes in pronunciation and on Anglicization.

If my arbitrary listings confuse you, I am sorry; it is my effort to make searching for family simpler. I hope it works for you.

Last, I cross referenced my Index with the Index typed by someone in the late 1800s / early 1900s. Sometimes I came across a will not listed in the original Index. Sometimes a will was listed in the typed Index that was not on the film copy: perhaps it was accidentally skipped, or it has been completely lost, or (hopefully), it was removed from its original place, and then misfiled in another year book. There are also a very few times when a will was listed under an erroneous name, partly because of the difficulty in reading the poor penmanship. By studying the full will, the actual name would become apparent. Where any of these problems have occurred, I have indicated it.

After I typed a will, I created the Index to it. When creating the Index, my mind was still very much on the will just typed, so sometimes the resulting Index line is muddled, with a forgotten word or odd phrase. I have tried to catch these when reviewing the Index, but I am afraid I may not have caught them all. If you catch them, please correct them, or let me know and I can correct them in my copy and send you and the IOM FHS a corrected disc of Wills and Index. It seems that, every time I go through the wills or the indices, I catch something wrong; sorry about that; perhaps those who come after me can correct it properly.

If you have a question about a will, please refer to the original; your insight as you study it may well be better than mine.

Archdeacon Will 1665 #032 Lezayre, of Bessy/Elizabeth Lawson alias Casement, dated 6 December 1664:

NOTE: Casement may be the maiden surname of Bessy

Summary: son Daniel; grandchild Ann Teare; cousin Jane Crowe; Christian Casement; grandchildren; dau Isabel Lawson exec. NOTE: Lezayre Parish follows the old form of female surnames, that is, a woman keeps her maiden surname after she marries, and is recorded under her maiden surname when married; thus, 'Casement' is the maiden surname of Bessie, and not her husband's surname. While other parishes at this time, e.g., Malew and Braddan, were changing to the English form of a woman being legally known under her husband's surname, several parishes, including Lezayre, continued the Manx form. By 1700, all parishes had changed to the English form.

2 Jan 1662: MR. William Christian of Ronaldsway (late Receivr: Genl:) was shot to death at Hangoe Hill the 2nd of January. He died most penitently and most courageously, made a good end, prayed earnestly, made an excellent speech, and the next day was buried in the Chancel of Kk Malew. (See Canon E. H. Stenning's book, beginning of p.43 for what is probably an accurate account of what led up to this)

November 14th 1665

The last will or testament of Mrs Eliz: Christian of Ronoldsway, who first comitted her soule to God and her bodie to Xs=-sian buriall; It: to the poore after the discrecon of her sonn Mr. George Christian; It: wheras it pleased God to lay his af=flicting hand upon her husband, and herselfe, for yt through ye great troubles that befell them was brought into such debts as that she cold not tell what will to make because she cold not tell whether or noe she had any debtles goods to dispose of; Therefore she did will and require her sonn Mr George Christian (as he ex=pected her blessing) to be good to all his brethren (especially to his brother Mr. Ewan Christian) and to help them to som livelie=houd whereby they might subsist; It: wheras she would faine have Creditors payd accordinge to Law, and would have her sonn Mr. George to pay the sd Creditors as aforesaid, she therefore constituted him the sd Mr. George Christian her lawfull Executor and to payall debts soe farre as the goods will extend, upon wch consideration she bequeathed to her sayd sonn all her right, Title, interest, and propriety she had, hath, ought, or should have, to, or in all her estate of Ronoldsway; the Milne of Corney; house, or houses with their Apurtenances of Duglas and Castletowne in this Isle, And of Walton and Sparth in England, and whatsoever else doth appertane, or in anywise belonge to her; And he to give Mr. Ewan Christian his brother some annuall thinge out of Walton or Sparth whereby he might subsist he haveinge spent all his tyme in serving his father and herselfe, lost his fortune abroad, and haveinge spent all his owne money and goods to serve them; And yf it doe happen that there wilbe som overplus of the goods when the debts are discharged, then that all her sons shall have an equall share and portion therof with their sayd brother Mr. George Christian as Executors with him of ye said goods

The humble peticon of

Jo: Moore

Shewing: That wheras yor peticoner is charged before you for a pte of the fine of the lease of his tenement clamed by Edmond Moore & his brother as due by the death of his wife, (under reformacon) yor peticoner himselpe is not able to travel soe farr but is willing to appeare att the next Court on this side and at this tyme hath sent Robt Callow to appeare for him and concems[?] that the case belongs to the Tempall Court, yf not humbly supplicates to refer the heareinge til lyor first Court on this side; ffurther yor peticoner hath not accordinge to the Common practice of ye Court got a legasie as all such in the like case have had and hope that you will decree a legasie for him; & for as much as that the Administrators alledge that he hath the cropp of corne & the geares belonging to the farme, it is answered that he hath payd full deere for it, and therefore supplicatts that therin frivellous allegacons be not an obstruccon of justice but that he may have reliefe and the benifitte of many former presidents

And as in duty bound will ever pray

It is true that the petconer is to have a good Legasie in regard therr is noe child, and as for the bargan I have noting to do wth it, either betwixt the Administrators and the peticonr or the petr
